Uit die Skatkamer van God -

Het jy God se geskenk aanvaar? Vandag is daar vir julle in die stad van Dawid die
verlosser gebore, Christus die
Here (Luk 2:11). Kersfees het
ons weer voor die onverbid-delike eis gestel om Christus as gawe van God te aanvaar of te verwerp. Ons Keuse is bepalend vir ons, tydelike en ewige welsyn,
baie mense word oorweldig deur die
gedagte om hulle self onvoorwaardelik aan Christus te gee, om een of ander rede is hulle bang om God se gawe sonder meer te aanvaar, hulle vrees hulle eie onwaar-digheid en onbekwaamheid, hulle is bang
vir algehele oorgawe, hulle is selfs oortuig
dat hulle sondes uit die verlede dit vir hulle onmoontlik maak om God se geskenk te aanvaar. Die goeie nuus van kersfees, wat deur die engel verkondig is dat, op grond
van God se alles insluitende en alles - vergewende liefde, Hy sy seun gegee het
om die verlosser van die mensdom te word,
hierdie aankondiging van die engel is noe
aan n kondiging gemaak nie, of aan die
geestelike leiers van daardie tyd nie, maar
aan nederige skaapewagters. Dit op sigself behoort n aanduiding te wees dat God se kersgeskenk, sy seun vir die hele wereld
sou wees - ook vir jou met besondere verse
en behoeftes laat hom toe om jou te lei en

29 December 2019
Marc Rodgers, NSRI
Plettenberg Bay station
commander, said:
At 09h07, Saturday,
28th December, NSRI

Plettenberg Bay duty crew were activated following eye-witness reports of a Trans Aguilhas competitor boat capsized off-shore of Robberg Point.

Sea rescue craft responded and on arrival on the scene 2 males were rescued onto sea rescue craft and brought to our sea rescue station, one male arranged to go to hospital to be medically checked following the incident.

The casualty boat was righted and then towed and recovered at our sea rescue station.

At 10h56, NSRI Plettenberg Bay duty crew were activated to assist at the Robberg Nature Reserve hiking trail where a female, age 20, from Durban, suffered a twisted ankle while hiking.

Nature Conservation officers were standing-by on the scene at the hiking party at the Wild Side of Robberg hiking trail. On NSRI crew arrival on the scene the patient was stabilised and secured into a Stokes basket stretcher and we hiked her to the car park and she has been transported to hospital by her dad for X-Rays. NSRI commend ranger Eben Lourens, of Nature Conservation, who arrived on the scene first and comforted the casualty and provided assistance on the scene until additional rescue crews arrived.

Sand Sculptures

I would like to bring the public's attention to a matter which is weighing heavily on my heart. You may have already seen the beautifully crafted sand sculptures on both Central and Lookout beaches. The gentlemen who design these sand sculptures use the beaches every year to showcase their skill and bless our town with something to delight young and old alike. I am incapacitated and can only move around with the aid of a wheelchair, so it is a special treat for me to visit Central beach and watch the 3 gentlemen at work on their sand sculptures. One can see their passion and attention to detail, the care which goes into selecting each and every shell used to decorate the sculptures.

These outings bring me great enjoyment, I spend time chatting with the gentlemen and am always mindful to give them a donation for their efforts. It was therefore an absolute shock for me to discover on my last visit that persons unknown had vandalized all the sand sculptures at Central beach, totally destroying each work of art until nothing but heaps of sea sand remained.

My shock at this wanton vandalism must pale in comparison to the sorrow these gentlemen probably feel, seeing their work destroyed so viciously. What kind of human being can derive pleasure from such a despicable act? These gentlemen use their sculpting skills not only to create a thing of beauty for all to enjoy, but also as a means of earning income. Times are hard for everyone and instead of resorting to begging, they have shared their talents in a positive and uplifting way. The destruction of these sculptures is an insult to their dignity, and it pains me greatly that my fellow man can be so devoid of morals.

This is not the first time the sand sculptures have been destroyed, the same occurred last year, also around the first week of December. The timing of these acts of vandalism coincides with the influx of students into Plett for Matric Rage. Is it possible that the destruction of the sand sculptures is the result of alcohol-fuelled "fun" had by these visitors to our town?

It is not a pleasant thought, considering the lengths everyone goes to in order to make these teenagers feel welcome.

It is understood that they will push the boundaries of harmless fun and even border on reckless behaviour, but when that behaviour has a direct impact on the ability of hard-working people to earn a meagre income, then it should be addressed. I was present at the same time 6 members of our Plett police force were there to view the scene. They were visibly upset and angry at the vandalism, as was I. Our tourism slogan is that Plett is a feeling, and this type of destructive behaviour goes against our sense of community in every way.

Perhaps our local teenagers heard some talk about this vandalism during Rage, the perpetrators maybe bragging about what they had done? It may prove difficult or even impossible to track down those responsible, but the police would welcome any information in this regard. I strongly feel we need to take measures to ensure this vandalism does not happen again next year. Otherwise, these gentlemen will soon choose another seaside town to bless with their works of art, and I for one will be extremely saddened by their absence.

Various PBCPA members and SAPS when an alert was received just before 8pm of tourist's that was robbed in the vicinity of Church Street. 2 bags was stolen by a bravo male, average built and about 5feet7, blue top with yellow hat, he had black pants on.
A meticulous search was done of the area.

The suspect was spotted in Odlands. The suspects was chased down and apprehended in Marine Drive near the hospital around 9pm and taken into custody by SAPS.
Brilliant, just brilliant cohesion amongst all security and emergency partners! Great job by everyone involved, well done!

Thank You

Yesterday was a rollercoaster of emotions for me. I went from being so disappointed and having such little faith in humankind after my best friend Kelly Honiball and I got mugged walking home. I was attacked with a knife but luckily not stabbed for my bag and phone while Kelly also had her bag and phone taken by the suspect. We made it back to the beach where a group of kind people who allowed us to use their phones to call my parents.
We got hold of the SAPD who acted immediately. My faith in humanity was restored by the incredible man pictured with Kelly and I, Tommy Taylor. He really did go the extra mile for us, I believe he was a guardian angel sent by God yesterday. (And I believe he has been serving for 36 years tomorrow - this just goes to show the type of man he is, dedicated to helping others.)
Tommy came to take our statements, made plenty calls to gather a search party and in the process we were able to gain access to track Kelly's phone where the chase down began. We were joined by Marius Venter from PBCPA, his family, neighbors and others witnessing the commotion who came to help us. We managed to catch the suspect and put him behind bars while retrieving all of our stolen items.

I am lost for words by the professionalism, dedication and care of all of those involved. Thank you a million times, over and over, to absolutely everyone. I am grateful beyond measure for you all.
P.S. In all the commotion I ticked off something on my bucket list - driving a police van. Ha ha, I'm sorry but thank you Tommy! Savanna Valjalo

Did you Know PLETT NSRI SIREN

We have all heard the NSRI emergency siren blast off the last few days calling the crew to an emergency. Plett NSRI siren is quite unique in South Africa and I wonder how many people know the history behind it. It evolved in the mid 1970's when we were struggling with the problem of notifying crew in a life or death emergency. No cell phones or beepers only nommer asseblief manual telephones.

On our station we had a few men who remember WW11 very clearly, so it was natural for them to turn their thoughts to that time of their lives when emergencies were commonplace.

After many weird and wonderful ideas, the municipal electrical engineer, Frank Redford, who was based in London during the Blitz of 1939/40, came up with the idea of using something similar to what was used in London, at that time.

He recalled there being an entire building somewhere in London where hundreds of sirens WW11 were stored. He wrote a letter to a friend working in the London Municipality, explaining what was needed and why. Within a few months the London Municipality had donated a siren. Union Castle offered to ship it out to SA at no charge, and our municipality used a mobile crane to hoist it in its present position on Signal Hill, where it's been since 1976. Initially it was also used to call out the volunteer firemen using a continuous wail, with the NSRI call being the "up and down" setting. Even with modern technology available today, the siren is still used by NSRI for emergency calls. It is tested every Friday at noon. I wonder how many lives the siren has saved over the last 45 odd years?
