UnCommon Sense

By Rose Scott

Blame and Shame

It is so interesting how we tolerate the learning process - with its inevitable mistakes or failures - of children and young adults. The 'blame and shame' that can haunt our every move as 'proper grownups' can discourage a willingness to embrace learning new skills and their practical implementation to create wisdom.

The need to learn and implement at an accelerated pace, combined with the responsibilities of parenting, generating income, maintaining a home, showing up for work and connecting with friends and family, can quickly become overwhelming. This is the reality that the last two years has created for many.

A baby does not simply stand up and walk. There is a learning process that moves from kicking legs, to crawling, to standing - holding on to anything close at hand - that all precede the accomplishment of mastering the skill of a coordinated series of activities that become the "natural" ability to walk, and then to run.

If a child were strapped to a chair to avoid tumbles, imagine how that child would be viewed at ages 12, 18 or 27 had they had the potential but never learned to walk! People asked if they were expected to pass a test for a driver's license, having had no prior opportunity to drive a vehicle before, are adamant that they would feel no sense of failure. It seems that our accepted limits of what is a reasonable expectation of competence lie between birth and our late twenties.

Over the age of thirty, societal expectations seem to infer that any skill not already mastered should be easily learned and practiced. Let's reflect on the reasonableness of this supposition. You may have been a parent for decades, but, at each development milestone, you may experience something for the FIRST TIME - parent of a baby boy, then a baby girl, then a toddler, a tween, a teen, a young adult, a maturing adult.

And consider - when you turn 40 - it is for the FIRST TIME. Positive focus is given to "firsts" - until that "magical" age when we (supposedly) know it all, have implemented in practice and are infinitely WISE.

Our societal norms should be more kind, gracious, compassionate towards others - and ourselves. The truth is that we are ALL students in the university of life. Whether we be in the "School of Hard Knocks" or be an alumnus of "Easy Street", no journey through life should be judged as more or less prestigious than another.

Inherent stubbornness and arrogance can result in a more challenging set of circumstances, a tendency to be harsh and critical may reflect in a lack of quality relationships, but nothing in life is cast in stone.

So, buckle up! We have ONE LIFE, so LIVE it, with a thirst for ever-increasing wisdom as we marry knowledge and practice. Do not let fear of falling prevent you from flying.

PAWS thanks Plett
Our recent street collection was very successful, raising the impressive sum of over R15 000 in one day! These regular collections are very important to us as they enable us to continue our work in our community. Our gratitude goes to all our volunteer collectors and donors, without whom we could not have a collection; the Bitou Municipality for their permission; all the businesses who allow us to collect in front of their premises; Market Square and Melville's for allowing us to collect at their centres; Café Bruges and The Table for great coffees supplied to our collectors and the Traffic Department for facilitating parking. Sincere thanks to all.

A word fitly spoken is like APPLES OF GOLD in a setting of silver-Proverbs 25v11

Last week we saw how the writer of the Book of Lamentations overcame despair by remembering the faithfulness of God. Today we continue in chapter 3 verse 24 "I say to myself, 'The Lord is my portion; therefore I will wait for him. The Lord is good to those whose hope is in him, to the one who seeks him; it is good to wait quietly for the salvation of the Lord.'"

Waiting and patience doesn't come easily to most people - we live in a world of instant gratification-everybody is in a hurry. "If you snooze you lose" is a popular saying, but our reading today reminds us that if the Lord is our portion we have to wait for Him. What does my portion mean? It is my inheritance in Christ both here on earth and in eternity and is the source of our happiness and blessing and satisfaction in our souls. If we have a relationship with Jesus Christ and know Him as our Saviour we have to wait quietly and not badger Him because our hope is that at the right time the Lord will supply salvation from our situation as verse 31 confirms- For no one is cast off by the Lord for ever. Though he brings grief, he will show compassion, so great is his unfailing love. For he does not willingly bring affliction or grief to anyone. Friends when grief and affliction come your way take heart that the Lord is aware and suffering with us. Saint Peter suffered and died for his faith, but he could write "In all this you greatly rejoice, though now for a little while you may have had to suffer grief in all kinds of trials. These have come so that the proven genuineness of your faith - of greater worth than gold, which perishes even though refined by fire - may result in praise, glory and honour when Jesus Christ is revealed." 1 Peter 1v6. Friends how we suffer is not only a testimony to both Christians and unbelievers of the reality of our faith, it also makes us reassess where we are building up treasure. If it is the here and

PAWS HEROES

Our sincere thanks go to Amanda Dunn and the team from Container Hire who moved our containers so quickly and efficiently at our premises. We needed to prepare the space for the start of our building operations on our new PAWS Clinic complex and they stepped in to help. They are our heroes and we are most grateful.
