Blame and Shame

It is so interesting how we tolerate the learning process - with its inevitable mistakes or failures - of children and young adults. The 'blame and shame' that can haunt our every move as 'proper grownups' can discourage a willingness to embrace learning new skills and their practical implementation to create wisdom.

The need to learn and implement at an accelerated pace, combined with the responsibilities of parenting, generating income, maintaining a home, showing up for work and connecting with friends and family, can quickly become overwhelming. This is the reality that the last two years has created for many.

A baby does not simply stand up and walk. There is a learning process that moves from kicking legs, to crawling, to standing - holding on to anything close at hand - that all precede the accomplishment of mastering the skill of a coordinated series of activities that become the "natural" ability to walk, and then to run.

If a child were strapped to a chair to avoid tumbles, imagine how that child would be viewed at ages 12, 18 or 27 had they had the potential but never learned to walk! People asked if they were expected to pass a test for a driver's license, having had no prior opportunity to drive a vehicle before, are adamant that they would feel no sense of failure. It seems that our accepted limits of what is a reasonable expectation of competence lie between birth and our late twenties.

Over the age of thirty, societal expectations seem to infer that any skill not already mastered should be easily learned and practiced. Let's reflect on the reasonableness of this supposition. You may have been a parent for decades, but, at each development milestone, you may experience something for the FIRST TIME - parent of a baby boy, then a baby girl, then a toddler, a tween, a teen, a young adult, a maturing adult.

And consider - when you turn 40 - it is for the FIRST TIME. Positive focus is given to "firsts" - until that "magical" age when we (supposedly) know it all, have implemented in practice and are infinitely WISE.

Our societal norms should be more kind, gracious, compassionate towards others - and ourselves. The truth is that we are ALL students in the university of life. Whether we be in the "School of Hard Knocks" or be an alumnus of "Easy Street", no journey through life should be judged as more or less prestigious than another.

Inherent stubbornness and arrogance can result in a more challenging set of circumstances, a tendency to be harsh and critical may reflect in a lack of quality relationships, but nothing in life is cast in stone.

So, buckle up! We have ONE LIFE, so LIVE it, with a thirst for ever-increasing wisdom as we marry knowledge and practice. Do not let fear of falling prevent you from flying.

PAWS thanks Plett

Our recent street collection was very successful, raising the impressive sum of over R15 000 in one day! These regular collections are very important to us as they enable us to continue our work in our community. Our gratitude goes to all our volunteer collectors and donors, without whom we could not have a collection; the Bitou Municipality for their permission; all the businesses who allow us to collect in front of their premises; Market Square and Melville's for allowing us to collect at their centres; Café Bruges and The Table for great coffees supplied to our collectors and the Traffic Department for facilitating parking. Sincere thanks to all.

*As for me and my house,
We will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:15*

Anton: 082 878 4193 / Graeme 083 628 1648

A word fitly spoken is like APPLES OF GOLD in a setting of silver-Proverbs 25v11

The Book of Lamentations is not a very popular book for readers of the Bible because lamentation means sorrow, mourning and regret and we find that depressing. But there is an expression "Don't judge a book by its cover" or in this case "don't judge a book by its title" so let us see what we can learn from this neglected book. Over the next few weeks I want to highlight some verses in chapter 3 starting today with verses 17-18 "I have been deprived of peace-I have forgotten what prosperity is. So I say "My splendour is gone and all I had hoped from the Lord". All of us have times of disappointment and stress which causes us despair, self-pity, emotional turmoil and lack of peace. Maybe you are hurting right now or maybe you cannot get over the hurt you have experienced in the past. Sometimes we are at fault because we won't "move on" and continue to nurse our actual or perceived hurt by keeping it on "life support". Or we are like cows regurgitating their cud by rehearsing our hurt as in verse 19-20 "I remember my affliction and my wandering, the bitterness and the gall. I well remember them and my soul is downcast within me". But this isn't God's will because He wants us to have a life of victory and joy as we are told in 1 Thessalonians 5v18- "give thanks in all circumstances; for this is God's will for you in Christ Jesus." - This is easier said than done when your world is crashing around you. How do we do this? The answer is in verse 21 "Yet this I call to mind and therefore I have hope; because of the Lord's great love we are not consumed for His compassions never fail. They are new every morning-great is your faithfulness" The hymn writer tells us "to count your blessings, name them one by one, and it will surprise you what the Lord has done". Every day when we wake up to the sound of birds, smell of flowers and beauty of nature these are blessings which we don't deserve when we consider our sinful nature. Friends don't waste another day "nursing your hurt", learn from Jesus' cry on the Cross "Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing" (Luke 23v34). Because of the Lord's compassion, love and faithfulness as expressed in that prayer we are not consumed -how then can we not forgive others for our hurts? We can even reverse the hurt and thus be a blessing to others.

God Bless. Graeme Greenwood
